

Eisenhower Still Plans Japan Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House said Tuesday that, despite growing concern about what troubles President Eisenhower may run into in Japan, "no change is contemplated" in his first visit there June 13-22.

The statement was issued by Mrs. Anne Eisenhower, associate press secretary, in response to reporters' inquiries, she said. There have been demonstrations by leftists in Japan against Eisenhower's visit and threats to continue them if he does come.

"The purpose of the visit," Mrs. Eisenhower said, "was and remains the payment of a courtesy call in a great sister democracy and the furtherance of the United States-Japanese friendship in connection with the United States-Japanese centennial celebration this year."

It was 100 years ago that formal U.S.-Japanese relations began.

The White House statement was issued a few hours after Secretary of State Christian A. Herter said he believes Eisenhower should, and will, go ahead with his plans to visit Japan.

Leftists May Not Let Ike Plane Land

TOKYO (AP)—Leftist students vowed Tuesday to mass on airport runways June 19 to halt President Eisenhower's arrival here for a four-day state visit. A government spokesman threatened "strong action" to halt any such demonstration.

"If Eisenhower forces his way in spite of our warning, he will be forced to tremble before hosts of hostile demonstrators," said a statement issued by leaders of the pro-Communist faction of Zengakuren, the student federation.

Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi met with the National Public Safety Commission, army directors and the labor minister to discuss the threat, which the students declared was aimed against "the vicious intrigue of international imperialists."

Welcome Committee

After Kishi's meeting, civilian support for the Eisenhower visit began to materialize.

A "National Ike Welcome Committee" was formed by some 70 representatives of local governments, Kishi's Liberal-Democratic party, and industrial, commercial and women's groups.

The committee decided to cooperate in mobilizing about 600,000 people to give the President a friendly welcome, and in selecting 10,000 persons to help police maintain order.

It was reported 9,000 police would be mobilized to control traffic at the airport and along the motorcade route.

Human Wall

A federation spokesman said the demonstrators would not carry weapons to the airport, but would form a human wall to block the President's passage.

About 50 federation members have been arrested in recent demonstrations against the new U. S.-Japan security treaty, Kishi's government, and the Eisenhower visit.

The students said they would have opposed Eisenhower's visit even if the summit talks had been successful "because the purpose of his trip is to prop up the Kishi regime."

They announced a huge demonstration will be held June 15 around the Diet because the government party is expected to ratify the U. S.-Japan security treaty in the upper house on that day.

Automatic June 19

Japanese action on the treaty—which grants U. S. military bases for a 10-year period in Japan—automatically will be completed June 19 unless the leftists can topple Kishi and dissolve Parliament. Upper house ratification is a formality. The treaty was approved by the lower house May 20.

Trying to stir up sufficient public sentiment to force dissolution of Parliament, the Socialist minority in the lower house gave resignations Monday to party Chairman Inejiro Asanuma.

The dominant Liberal Democrats asked the Socialists to agree on a 10-day recess of Parliament, thus delaying validation of the treaty until June 29 and putting it off until after Eisenhower departs.

Nixon Outpolls Governor Brown

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Vice President Richard Nixon, Republican, outdistanced Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Tuesday night in their separate bids for presidential delegations on the basis of early returns from California's primary election.

But Nixon was running unopposed in his party while Brown had opposition from George McLain, old age pension promoter. Brown led McLain by a virtual 2-1 margin.

The vote in 4,114 of 28,783 precincts gave Nixon 132,979. In 4,115 precincts on the Democratic side the vote was Brown 112,807 and McLain 57,552.

But Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee before which Herter testified, said his misgivings about Eisenhower going have not been entirely set to rest.

Fulbright said Herter presented a persuasive case in support of Eisenhower going ahead despite left-wing demonstrations and riots in Japan against the U.S. chief of state's visit.

The secretary of state, testifying first in open session, said in reply to questions that "under existing circumstances, the President's plans ought to remain unchanged."

Then Herter asked to reserve further discussion for a closed-door session. After that 30-minute meeting, Fulbright told reporters "I got the impression the President will go."

And Herter himself told newsmen "I think so" when asked if he personally thought Eisenhower would make the trip.

Fulbright quoted Herter as saying Eisenhower would defer the visit if the Japanese government asked for a delay. But the senator said he understood that the government of Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi has sent assurances that it can provide adequate security to protect Eisenhower.

The White House announced that Mrs. Eisenhower will not accompany the President on his 22,794-mile Far Eastern tour starting next Sunday.

The First Lady is hospitalized with asthmatic bronchitis. The associate White House press secretary, Anne Wheaton, said Mrs. Eisenhower is "getting along nicely" but she doesn't know if the First Lady will be able to leave the hospital.

White House press secretary James C. Hagerty, who is making arrangements for the President's trip, said in Manila Eisenhower would be accompanied by his daughter-in-law, Barbara. She is the wife of Lt. Col. John Eisenhower, a White House aide, who also will make the trip to Japan, Korea, the Philippines, Formosa and other Pacific points.

Senate Unit Increases Defense Fund

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Senate subcommittee — in a postsummit mood to swell the nation's military muscle — added more than 600 million dollars to the defense money bill Tuesday. Other increases seemed certain.

Its most important decision was to restore 233 million dollars for a new conventionally powered carrier—money the House had denied entirely. The Senate appropriations group's move was a big victory for the Navy.

The actions—and the subcommittee's work was not yet finished—indicated an overall Senate bill totaling more than 40 billion dollars for the bookkeeping year starting July 1. This would top President Eisenhower's requests and the House figure by perhaps a billion dollars.

Key Items

While the subcommittee was ploughing through the giant bill, Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas told newsmen he expects the Senate to make "substantial increases" in certain key military items over totals the House passed before the summit talks collapsed in mid-May.

The House bill came to $39,337,867,000. This was only $121,967,000 more than Eisenhower asked. But the House Appropriations Committee reshaped vital parts of the President's military budget to furnish hundreds of millions of dollars more for preparations the House group considered urgent.

In restoring funds for another super flatboat, the Senate subcommittee headed an administration plea. The vote was reported near unanimous.

The subcommittee also went along with an administration bid to cancel a House-voted 3 per cent across-the-board cutback in certain kinds of procurement. This is worth about 400 million dollars.

Soviet Plan Ousts Yanks From Europe

GENEVA (AP)—The Soviet Union Tuesday formally presented its new disarmament plan, which would give American forces 18 months to get out of Europe.

Introducing the Soviet proposal at the 10-nation disarmament conference, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian Zorin said a solution of the disarmament problem had been made "even more urgent and imperative" by events which led to the Paris summit fiasco.

In keeping with the Kremlin's line, he declared the summit conference "was torpedoed by the aggressive actions of the United States."

The Soviet disarmament plan couples the elimination of all means of delivering nuclear weapons with the "simultaneous" elimination of all military bases on foreign territories and the withdrawal of foreign troops to within their national boundaries.

Time Limit

The three-stage plan sets a time limit of 12 to 18 months for the completion of these measures in its initial phase.

Western delegations made no comment on the substance of the Soviet plan at the session, resuming the talks which had been in recess for six weeks.

Privately, Western conference sources made it plain, however, that the opening phase of the Soviet plan is unacceptable to the West as it now stands.

Zorin went out of his way to stress that the Soviet proposal includes several Western ideas put forward in the first six-week round of the disarmament talks. "This refers first of all," he said, "to the considerations put forward by France to the effect that the implementation of the disarmament program should begin with the destruction of the carriers of nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction."

But by linking the French idea to the abolition of bases and the withdrawal of foreign troops, the plan threatened to throw the conference into another deadlock.

Zorin added little new to what was already known about the Soviet plan.

He told a news conference later that the Soviet government might turn over its new plan to the United Nations General Assembly if agreement could not be reached here.

Western delegations expressed the hope that the Soviet bid was meant as a basis for serious negotiation and not as only a propaganda preparation for the General Assembly's fall session.

Zorin told the newsmen that the Soviet Union is not prepared to go into any detailed discussion on technical matters until after a political agreement has been reached on "general and complete disarmament." Western sources said this might turn out to be another snag to serious discussions here.

Zorin also said the Soviet position on partial disarmament measures remains unchanged. This means continued refusal to discuss any partial disarmament measures unless the West declares officially it does not want general and complete disarmament, the way the Soviets understand the term.

Smoke Chokes Passengers

Subway Fire Traps 3,000

NEW YORK (AP)—A third rail flash set fire to a trash pile in the Lexington Avenue subway tunnel beneath Grand Central terminal Tuesday. Eleven rush hour trains were stalled and more than 3,000 persons trapped up to three hours in choking smoke and terrifying heat and darkness.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner ordered a system-wide cleanup and safety inspection of the subways after a report on the incident from the Transit Authority.

Authority Chairman Charles L. Patterson said one of his inspectors noted the fire hazard two weeks ago on the site of a repair project. Patterson added that the private contractor on the job ignored a warning to clean up the trash and that the inspector never followed up on the matter.

One of the largest concentrations of disaster equipment in years converged on 42nd St. and Park Ave., one of the pulse centers of the city. There were no serious casualties.

At least 148 persons were taken to hospitals and rescue workers said several hundred others were treated at the scene for smoke poisoning. While being evacuated from the tunnel, one woman hurt her neck when she fell off a catwalk.

PUC Orders Rail Crossing At Gravel Place Kept Open

HARRISBURG (AP)—The Public Utility Commission Tuesday ordered the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad to install automatic signals and gate at a grade crossing in Stroud Twp., Monroe County.

The PUC estimated cost of the project on Stokes Mill road at $36,000. Of that amount, it said the county and township agreed to contribute $9,000 and $1,000, respectively.

The commission said it would put up $7,000 from state funds as an aid to the county, township and railroad. DL&W will have to pay the remaining $16,000. It added.

The railroad, whose tracks intersect the road, had requested that the crossing be closed again as it was in 1945 under a previous PUC order.

It had been used since 1955 when it was reopened on an emergency basis following floods spawned by Hurricane Dianne.

Municipal and industrial officials urged continued use of the crossing because of increased traffic and interest of existing plants and other industries planning to locate in the area.

Accident Separates Dog From Mistress

BROWNIE is back at Annandale Farms, N.J., although his mistress is still a patient in Monroe County Hospital here.

Brownie is the pet dog of Mrs. Elsie Smith, one of two persons injured in an accident on Route 402 last Tuesday. The dog was in the car with Mrs. Smith and Charles Heisler, the two-car crash occurred. He escaped injury and left the scene.

Brownie first returned to the scene about 3 a.m. the following morning. For three nights, he sat and howled. Residents of the area made inquiries which established that he was involved in the accident.

The Monroe County SPCA set a trap at the scene and maintained a day and night patrol of the area, with the assistance of neighborhood residents.

Brownie refused to cooperate. Even a sweater belonging to his mistress, used as a lure, failed to entice him.

But yesterday morning, hungry and loneliness apparently defeated him. He appeared at the door of the home of Mrs.

Base Denies Atomic Blast Occurred

McGUIRE AIR FORCE BASE, N.J. (AP) — Fire broke out Tuesday in the launching shelter of an atomic-armed Bomarc anti-aircraft missile, causing the release of a small amount of radiation, the Air Force reported.

At first there was fear of widespread radiation over the sparsely populated inland area around the base east of here. However, the Air Force in Washington later said there was no danger to the public.

Roads Closed

The few highways that crisscross the remote countryside were closed off for a time. Police with geiger counters checked cars coming from the direction of the base.

State police initially reported an atomic explosion occurred.

A Defense Department expert said later, however, there had been no explosion.

In similar incidents, the Air Force has said that minute radioactive particles might be distributed over a very limited area as the result of fire or the detonation of conventional explosives in the trigger of a nuclear load.

The fire occurred at the 46th Air Defense Missile Squadron base in nearby Jackson Township, an area of scrubby pine forests and a few farms. In 1960 its population was 3,500.

McGuire is about 20 miles southeast of Trenton, the state capital.

The Air Force here said the blaze broke out at 3:15 p.m. and was extinguished 45 minutes later.

Given Wrong Information

A sergeant at the missile base reportedly called state police at the Ft. Dix station saying "an atomic warhead had exploded" and asked troopers to shut off the roads against the probable danger of heavy radiation. Police did so.

Several hours later traffic was allowed to resume.

Several hundred soldiers on a training maneuver at Ft. Dix, a vast military camp near here, were pulled back as a precaution.

The Defense Department, the Atomic Energy Commission, and the State Department of Health all said they would investigate.

Several hours after the fire, decontamination experts clad in long green cloth attire, resembling heavy winter underwear, checked for radioactivity with geiger counters.

The fire was in a 50-foot concrete shed that houses the slender 90A Bomarc missile.

On the basis of first reports, officials speculated the fire may have melted or burned open part of the covering of the Bomarc's nuclear armament.

Difficult To Fight

Firemen said it had been a "difficult fire to fight," but Air Force spokesmen at the missile site would give no details.

A Defense Department expert in Washington said the TNT trigger of the warhead had "torched" in flame without exploding.

McGuire was the first base in the country to get the Bomarc. It was installed last December.

There is another Bomarc site at the Suffolk County Air Force Base in New York.

About 300 men are stationed at the base here at full complement. The nearest resident is about two miles away. The base is about 35 miles northeast of Philadelphia.

The missile is 47 feet long, weighs 7½ tons, and has stubby wings. It lifts from its pad by a liquid fuel rocket engine and then two ram-jet engines take over. The Bomarc can range 250 miles and is guided electronically from the ground.

South Wayne Seniors Hear Address By Rev. Fulmer

NEWFOUNDLAND — "The world needs you and God needs you," Rev. Dr. Frederick G. Fulmer, Moravian pastor, told members of the graduating class of Southern Wayne Joint School during baccalaureate services held at the school Sunday night.

"In the light of the faith that you profess, life does need every one of you, perhaps now more than ever," he said. "Without you, a part of God's work will be unfinished. It is a denial of God's purpose for you to say that life does not need you."

Following the class procession, the Rev. Roy J. Davis, minister of the Sterling Methodist Church, asked the invocation. Dr. Fulmer read the Scripture, and the school chorus sang "Glory," by Cadman. Announcements were given and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Davis.

Seek To Lower Rate Schedule

NEW YORK (AP)—Railway Express Agency Tuesday filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission a lower rate schedule on automobile, truck and trailer parts. The rates would be effective June 14.

The agency said, "The new rates are expected to afford substantial cost savings to consumers and the automotive trade on stock and replacement part shipments."

A typical example of the reductions, the agency said, is that between Detroit and New York. The existing cost of $11.57 a hundred pounds will be cut to $4.63.

Worthy Effort

The American Heritage Foundation has launched a drive to encourage the public to contribute generously with dollars and votes to make the 1960 political campaign the biggest ever.

Cooperating in the new effort is the Advertising Council, together with more than 150 national organizations.

The campaign is aimed at getting every adult citizen to donate what he can to the party of his choice, and to follow that up by casting his ballot.

The Advertising Council, which will try to get advertisers to contribute space and time for appeals for dollars and votes, said the campaign will seek only to educate the public on its duty to support the American political process.

The drive will be carried out in radio, television, newspaper and other forms of advertising. John C. Cornelius, president of the American Heritage Foundation, predicted the campaign will bring out the biggest vote in American history this Fall.

Both Sen. Thruston B. Morton, of Kentucky, the Republican party chairman, and Paul M. Butler, Democratic party chairman, heartily endorse the drive.

We hope Americans of every political faith will likewise support the appeals in an active manner. Heretofore, the political campaigns have been strictly on a partisan basis, financed for the most part by well-to-do individuals, organizations and companies.

Sponsors of the new idea are working on the premise that if the opportunity to contribute of their dollars and their time is made available to the public, the people will follow up by turning out at the polls in larger numbers and also evidencing a greater interest in all phases of government.

And, while a need for party chests will still remain, there will be a lesser dependence upon the wealthy to finance vote campaigns and therefore less pressure on office seekers to promise political favors in return for contributions.

Instead, costs of getting out the vote will be shifted to the public where the burden rightfully belongs. The idea intrigues us as one which has considerable merit and deserves the support of everyone at the ground roots level.

Opinions Of Other Editors

Extravagance Of Strikes

As president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, Benjamin F. Fairless speaks from the vantage point of an elder statesman in the steel industry. And it was for industrial statesmanship that he spoke at a recent meeting of the institute.

Unions, he said, "are here to stay," needed by employees and the companies, and no one "wants to break" the United Steelworkers. The companies must do a "more effective and convincing job of explaining their problems" to the employees, the unions and the country.

Neither the industry, the steelworkers, nor the nation's economy, he believes, "can continue to support the senseless extravagance" of such strikes as occurred in steel for more than three months last winter.

One provision in the settlement of that strike was the establishment of two companies, both now at work under co-chairmanship of David J. McDonald, USW president, and R. Conrad Cooper, executive vice-president of the United States Steel Corp. One of these groups deals with rules on local working conditions; the other, a permanent body, addresses itself to human relations research.

This is a promising development. It helps to spread through the calendar the examination of questions which have tended to be discussed only under pressure at the end of a two-or three-year contract.

James P. Mitchell, Secretary of Labor, recently described a need for labor-management contracts that would "supplement the bargaining table, pre-filing it with a new form of communication disassociated from bargaining and deadlines and demands."

Let it be hoped that the steel industry committees will succeed in contributing to this year-round process of adjustment.

George Sokolsky Says . . .

Silly Season

I see in "The Insider's Newsletter," an item to the effect that Denver, Colo., has invented a new method of hiring and firing teachers.

They will do it by the pound. To discover how competent a teacher is to teach, let us say, calculus, Denver will put the teacher on a scale and weigh her. If the weight is right, that proves the teacher knows the Quantum Theory.

The story says that Denver's Health Service Department has listed a minimum and a maximum for teachers. If a young lady is 5 feet 6 inches, she must weigh between 99 and 170 lbs.

That proves beyond doubt that she speaks French like a native, can teach American history like Charles A. Beard and can produce a school orchestra as Paul Whiteman's father did. If this same teacher seeks tenure, she must weigh between 116 and 142 lbs. Nothing is said about the condition of her teeth.

Maybe, you think I dreamed all this up on a Spring day or that I have run out of copy. So help me, that is what "The Insider's Newsletter" says in its issue for women, on May 30, on page two. I read it twice to make sure that they were talking about teachers and not horses.

The account even gives the reason for this important advance in education: teachers must be "physically, emotionally and mentally fit adults," and in Denver they expect to prove this fitness by weight.

It is true that these days it is fashionable to believe that skinny people are fitter than fat. It is said that fat people are more prone to heart ailments. However, skinny folks catch colds and sneeze.

So, which is a better teacher — one who is prone to a heart attack or one who sneezes? Of course, well-rounded but not fat girls are picked up to the eye; it is doubtful if very young children really care.

As for the emotions, that is indeed a tough one. The very fat girl may not have boys and that might sour her and she might take it out on the kids. On the other hand, it has long been traditional that fat folks are gay and jolly and skinny ones have a mean and hungry look. So you can form your opinion from psychiatry or Shakespeare as you choose.

Denver being so high, the blood pressure is different up there and they may have a different experience from the rest of us with the emotions. Nevertheless, teachers are people anywhere and are likely to have emotions about this or that, no matter how skinny or fat.

Finally, mental fitness is something which appears in queer places. Certainly nobody would have expected Mozart's father to produce such a son. Aristotle, Newton and Einstein must have been mentally fit, for theirs were the greatest intellects the human race has yet produced but their progenitors gave no indications that they would produce genius.

I once saw Einstein walking about in the queerest clothes ever and if a stranger who had no intimation of his greatness saw him, he might have imagined that here was an old man who had lost his way. Well, it was Einstein all right and he had such mental fitness as no teacher in Denver ever possessed.

It would seem that we get wacky ideas all the time and this one is particularly wacky. Why not select teachers by the size of their feet or the color of their hair?

For instance, a red-headed teacher might be regarded as too fiery and a blonde as too flirtatious, while a brunette might be seductive which would start the little boys off wrong. Perhaps there should be only bald-headed teachers.

That would be dangerous too, for the little boys might grow up with a complex to hate women and that might make them mapochists or something. There are books on the subject which you can read if you are so inclined.

The best solution to this serious problem would be to hire teachers who have no heads at all. Or better still, to do all our educating by closed circuit television and then the children would know that Ward Bond settled the country west of the Mississippi, that Jack Paar discovered Cuba and that Ar. Francis is prettier than Venus de Milo.

In One Year, Out The Other!

Elsa Maxwell had nothing on the Viechnicki boys the other night as they threw one of the top parties of the decade. Everything was done up in A-1 fashion from the social get-together prior to the King Henry the Fifth feed, right through the presentation of awards to worthy organizations.

All who took in the affair, including the top dignitaries of both boroughs and surrounding territories, enjoyed themselves from start to finish.

Randy Morris, Don Rau and Norman Warner visited Elmira, N. Y., last Saturday to see Harry Warner's Erie nine meet the New Yorkers in a New York-Pennsylvania Professional Baseball League contest.

The Readers and Tannersville residents started out 10 a.m. Saturday and returned at 4 a.m. Sunday.

Warner, pilot of Erie, is the son of Norman, a long-time baseball figure in this area.

Harry's nine is made up of youngsters with speed and defense as the main forte, the returnees noted. Most of his club is made up of Puerto Ricans and Cubans.

Wilmer Vogt and Art Singer renewed old acquaintances in town the other night when the Barrett businessman came to Stroudsburg for a shindig.

Art and Wilmer are old hands at social gatherings having attended many during their score of years of friendship.

Don Meyer is showing off to his Stroudsburg friends a trout that is bigger than him.

However, if one takes a closer look at the angler's dream you will find it looks more like a sea animal.

But Meyer doesn't care, it's a catch in any man's pool.

The "head" of a shrimp houses the crustacean's heart and stomach. The tasty meat in the tail is the part that is eaten.

An annual eclipse of the sun occurs when the moon is more distant than usual.

That would be dangerous too, for the little boys might grow up with a complex to hate women and that might make them mapochists or something. There are books on the subject which you can read if you are so inclined.

The Pennsylvania Story

Labor's Goal

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — Organized labor in Pennsylvania undeniably is one of the big guns top Democratic leaders are relying upon heavily to help boom them through an upcoming hectic fall election schedule.

It is generally conceded however that the potential effect of such an assist cannot be spelled out in specific terms. Too many variable factors are present.

Labor as a politically-influencing force is still suffering growing pains. For the most part in the past labor support has produced hit or miss results.

The fact remains however that labor as such in the Keystone State quite definitely is beginning to knit into a cohesive force—an element while as yet not necessarily a deciding factor, is becoming a strong influencing factor.

Primary hump still remaining to be overcome is the oft-times strong difference of political opinion between labor leadership and rank and file membership.

Top labor leaders recognize that one of their basic weaknesses in this respect is lack of a thorough "selling job" from the top down. Old fashioned hard-headed direction of the ranks without fairly sound reasoning is fast fading from the picture.

This has been underscored somewhat painfully during recent past sessions of the Legislature when with tax scrambles at their peak, labor leaders of times found themselves going one way while membership segments headed the other way.

On the tax front during these sessions there was little time for organizing labor ranks.

Basically it was a question of speed — with labor leaders themselves siding with Democratic administration forces while lower echelon labor units frequently bucked and opposed the standards taken by leaders of the powerful "big four."

In contrast, the election of 1954 which sent Democrats into office in Pennsylvania for the first time in 16 years and the Democratic Lawrence win of 1958 must be conceded as representing an outstanding showing of the effectiveness, or perhaps the potential effectiveness, of organized labor support.

In both campaigns there was adequate time to "sell" the mass labor membership on the virtues of supporting the Democratic tickets.

The campaign of selling the Leader and then the Lawrence tickets to rank and file was tremendous. Labor chieftains readily conceded the chore was one of the most expensive and thoroughgoing ever conducted.

In both instances the time element was on their side. In the tax hassles of recent sessions it was not.

Importance of all this lies in the fact that Pennsylvania voters this November will have the opportunity of virtually revamping the Legislature as they select all 210 members of the House and half of the 50 members of the Senate.

This is the goal towards which labor leaders in Pennsylvania arm-in-arm with the Democratic Lawrence Administration are driving hard.

Both want a Democratic-controlled House and Senate rather than the split that marked the 1955, 1959 and now the 1960 sessions insofar as their common goals are concerned.

The pickling of several top-labor bills by the GOP-controlled Senate during past sessions has riled labor. Their attitude has been summed up in these three words: "Wait and see!"

Reports from Congress

By Congressional Quarterly
Washington — Ladies, there's still hope for those lipstick shades the Government wants to ban or health grounds. Help is on the way, in the form of a bill approved by a House committee June 2.

Already passed by the Senate, the bill sets up a new procedure for determining the safety of color additives in foods, drugs, and cosmetics. A key provision would permit the Food and Drug Administration to establish safe tolerance limits for potentially harmful additives.

Lack of such authority led to the lipstick hassle. When the Supreme Court ruled that FDA was bound by law to ban any color additive found to be harmful, in no matter what quantity, the agency moved to prohibit further use of 14 coal-tar colors commonly used in lipstick.

Suntan Lotions

By Herman N. Bundesen, M.D.
Are sun tan lotions any good?

Of course they are, at least many of them are. Some, however, may be too effective.

Produce Vitamin D
The sun's ultraviolet rays do more than cause sunburn. They also manufacture vitamin D in the skin. And when you soak a youngster's skin with heavy coats of some protective lotions, you don't give these healthful rays a chance to get through.

You may block out all chance of sunburn, but you block out the formation of needed vitamin D at the same time.

Exposure Period
Most kids can safely begin their daily sunbaths with about a five-minute exposure the first day. Exceptions are redheads and blondes, who probably will burn more easily because of their fair skin. Two minutes on the first day is probably enough for them.

I know you don't want your youngsters to be burned and I don't either, but it's probably best not to use any lotion at all during this initial exposure period.

Gradual Increase
Gradually, this unprotected exposure to the sun can be increased a few minutes each day.

Now let's get back to suntan lotions.

Once the allotted exposure time without their aid is over, it's time to put on the lotion.

And this is when you want a lotion that really screens out the harmful rays.

Effective Lotion
I think you will find that yellow petroleum jelly provides an effective screen. So do many of the commercial lotions and oils.

In order to be on the safe side, I suggest that you re-apply the suntan protection at least every two hours or so. Naturally, if you or the kids go into the water or roll around in the sand much, you might have to do it more frequently.

Wrong Way
Many persons, unfortunately, try to determine when they or their children have had enough sun, not by timing the exposure period, but by the color of the skin. They believe that it's safe to wait until the skin takes on a red flush.

Unfortunately, by this time it's usually much too late to prevent a nasty sunburn.

Question And Answer
Mrs. V. R.: Can you tell me what causes my heart to skip a beat?

My electrocardiograms are negative and the doctor tells me to forget about it, but the condition bothers me.

Could it damage my heart if it is allowed to continue?

Answer: Simple skipped beats, called extrasystoles, are usually of no significance. They may come from "nerves," coffee or tobacco.

If you smoke — stop it!

Q. I am receiving social security disability benefits because of a severe handicap. My condition has improved and I have an opportunity to take a job under my State's rehabilitation program for handicapped people. I hope that my checks from social security will not stop while I am in this training program.

A. The social security law encourages disabled people to regain their ability to earn their own living. JOHN L. LOEB, Senior Partner of Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades & Co., pushes the button setting into operation the firm's new automated communications network linking 110 cities. Walter P. Marshall, President of Western Union, designers, engineers and builders of the complex system, looks on. The 25,000-mile, private automated wire network puts all of the offices of its correspondents and branches in contact with the main New York office of Loeb, Rhoades and the stock and commodity exchanges within seconds, reducing by half the amount of time formerly needed to transmit buy and sell orders.

Loeb, Rhoades Brings Investors Across Country

INVESTORS, no matter where they live in the United States, were brought within seven seconds of Wall Street today when John L. Loeb, senior partner of Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades & Co., pushed a button setting in operation the firm's new automated communications network, linking 110 cities.

The 25,000-mile private, high-speed telegraph network puts all of the offices of its correspondents and branches in contact with the main New York office of Carl M. Loeb, Rhoades & Co., and the stock commodity exchanges within seconds. It operates at a speed of 450 characters per minute, reducing by half the amount of time formerly needed to transmit and sell orders.

Joined Firm
Walter P. Marshall, president of Western Union, which designed, engineered, and built the complex system, joined Loeb in sending inaugural messages simultaneously to the 110 brokerage offices. Seconds later the first order arrived at Loeb, Rhoades' office over one of the twelve communications units and was placed on one of a series of continuous high-speed belts of a 388-foot conveyor system taking the order to the proper department for execution.

Loeb hailed the new system as "an automation convenience for facilitating the channeling of investors' savings to selected industries and enterprises. This choice by the individual investor, assisted by his investment advisers as to where his savings and resources will be invested, reflects the versatility and flexibility of a broad consensus, which in the final analysis contributes to the dynamism and growth of our country. These decisions can now be registered instantly in the nation's chief market, no matter in what part of the United States the investor may live," Mr. Loeb said.

Automated System
Besides transmitting buy and sell orders, the automated system, located in Loeb, Rhoades' newly constructed communications center on the 16th floor at 40 Wall Street, can be used to provide a constant flow of financial news, comment and analysis. Through the system, stock analyses, market news, and market interpretations coming from Loeb, Rhoades research department can be transmitted to any point in the United States faster than the same material is circulated within the Loeb, Rhoades New York office.

The Investment Research Department, employing 40 highly trained financial analysts supervised by Armand G. Erpf and Samuel Lee Steadman, two Loeb, Rhoades partners widely recognized for their market judgment in the investment world, also publishes the well-known "Fortnightly Review" with a circulation of over 75,000. Market orders, however, will at all times have priority on the facilities of the communications system, giving heavy buying and selling volume the right of way.

Easy-To-Mix Concrete Patio Notes

THANKS to the new, easy-to-mix concrete, now available, anyone can pave a patio with these attractive concrete squares. Once the patio is paved, full size patterns are available that simplify building all the furniture needed. The secret to paving a terrace with the skill of an experienced craftsman, lies in the method outlined in an easy to follow pattern.

No special tools or skill are required since every step is explained in language everyone understands. Even those who haven't worked with their hands since grammar school days are amazed with their dexterity once they start to follow the step by step directions offered below. Equally important is the savings effected, frequently up to two-thirds the cost of having it done by others.

Assumption
The pattern method assumes you know nothing about laying concrete and explains how to lay out guide lines to excavate foundation, what materials to buy, when each is used. Step-by-step directions and illustrations show how to put in the foundation, how to line-up dividing strips, how to add color with various cement dyes now available.

By using metal strips as dividers, squares can be made to any size desired. Those illustrated were three foot square. The finished effect is comparable to an expensive terrazzo job.

The furniture is made from stock-size lumber. Full-size patterns are merely traced on wood. Each piece is then cut to actual size. Whenever two parts are fastened together, pattern shows the exact location of screw and bolt holes.

Colorful Addition
If you like dining, dancing and living outdoors, this terrace can provide a colorful addition to your home. After dinner, when the stars shine overhead, move furniture aside, and enjoy dancing. The smooth deck provides an ideal weatherproof dance platform.

Send 50c in coin, check or money order for Pave Your Own Patio Pattern No. 591. Send 20c each for Lawn chair Pattern No. 32, Lawn Settee Pattern No. 39, and Terrace Table No. 326.

Send 35c additional for 64 page catalog illustrating over 300 other build it yourself projects to The Daily Record, P.O. Box 215, Pleasantville, New York. Please add 25c if First Class Mail is desired.

Freezer Saves Budget With Planning

THE HOMEMAKER who has a new electric refrigerator-freezer can save time and labor and pare down the food budget if she plans family meals in advance.

Here's how to find extra hours and save money:

1. Plan a week's menu and shop just once a week—preferably on Monday or Tuesday, the slower days—instead of making three or more weekly trips to the supermarket. Fresh foods stay fresh for a week in the roomy refrigerator compartments that are specially cooled and humidified.

2. Look for sales of frozen foods and freezable fresh foods. The freezing section will keep large quantities of them for weeks.

3. Double or triple recipes when making a casserole stew, soup, spaghetti sauce, or baked goods. What isn't needed immediately can be frozen to make effortless meals later and add extra hours for enjoying unexpected guests.

Protect Walls With Hardboard

A WAINSCOT is the modern and most satisfactory way of protecting a vulnerable lower wall area, or covering up cracked plaster or similar damage already done.

Generally, in existing construction, there are two methods of applying wainscots. Over walls which are uneven, furring strips are recommended. There should be sufficient strips or headers so that all edges of each panel will bear on a continuous support.

Modern High Level Is Coming

THE contemporary tri-level is coming into more demand each day, not only because it looks good, but also because the layout offers the most comfortable manner of living in a large home. This week's featured tri-level combines brick veneer and frame construction to make an attractive exterior along with modern shed roof.

The first level has a sizable vestibule with guest closet and access to the kitchen, with stairs to the upper level and lower level. To the rear of the house is the huge family-living area. Family room has dramatic accent in featuring an off-floor level ledge rock fireplace with decorative touch. There are folding doors between the family and living room, which enables the area to be completely open, or separated. Both rooms have sliding glass doors leading to the outdoors. What an ideal spot for a terrace! Living center here is keyed to contemporary living requirements.

Notice Kitchen
Notice the kitchen which is a compact service hub with popular front location. . . no lost steps here! Dining room location also saves steps for the homemaker in serving meals indoors. Large corner windows spot light this area, featuring a huge planter box along these windows.

Upper sleeping level places master bedroom in front location with its own bath and stall shower, plus a large wardrobe closet. Rear corner bedroom is almost as large as master bedroom, even the third bedroom is better than average size, including an extra sized wardrobe closet. Linen closet in hall is convenient to bedrooms. Bath has vanity and towel cabinet.

Window Areas
Excellent window areas throughout entire upper level provides maximum light and ventilation. Lower level is easily accessible, featuring laundry facilities, with heating unit so located as to allow for a spacious recreation room.

Access to the inside garage is an added convenience. It has a side exit at the far end for easy storage of your garden equipment.

This plan conforms to general H.A. VA and Building Code requirements. Included with this plan, you receive Specification Guide, Material List, and Conversion Detail Sheet. The plans contain 1,496 square feet 20,375 cubic feet and Garage 367 square feet. Your builder or material supplier can give you the average cost per square or cubic foot in your area.

"Complete Building Plan, including Detail Sheet, Material List and Specification Guide for design number H-566 may be purchased for $9.75 for first set; two for $18.25; three for $26.25; or four for $33.75. You may also purchase The Daily Record Plan Book showing 70 designs for 75 cents postpaid. Address all questions and orders to Homograf Home Plan Dept., The Daily Record, Warren, Michigan.

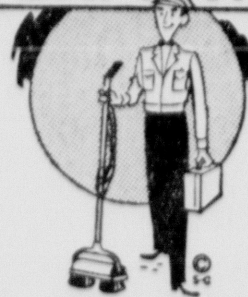

Question

QUESTION: We have to replace the screens in our house and are thinking of getting aluminum screening this time. However, we aren't sure we like the bright, silvery type. Does aluminum screening come in colors?

ANSWER: A new process known as alodizing has made it possible to get aluminum screening in several colors, among them green, gold and charcoal. In addition, the manufacturers of "colored" aluminum screening claim that the new process increases the "see-through-ability" of the screening and cuts down glare as much as 30 per cent.

Learns Good Lesson About Sale Of House

AP Newsfeatures
SOME YEARS ago we learned an interesting lesson about the sale of a house.

We accompanied a friend on a full day's tour as he looked for a house that would suit both his pocketbook and his tastes. Nothing seemed to catch his fancy and, at the end of the day, we discussed some of the houses we had seen.

"You know," he said, "I might have been interested in that 7-room split level we looked at except for one thing. Did you notice the way that kitchen faucet was leaking?"

He explained that if the owner could not be bothered with fixing a faucet leak, especially when the house was up for sale, he probably neglected the big things too.

For the want of a washer, therefore, the sale probably was lost.

We have since had considerable confirmation of this point: prospective home purchasers often are discouraged from entering into negotiations because of small things. They may overlook the fact that a house needs painting (which will cost them several hundred dollars if they make the purchase), but they become wary if a door knob is loose, even though replacing a set screw, at a cost of a few cents, will repair the trouble.

The philosophy of our friend was not without merit. It probably would not be true all the time that a home owner who neglects small things also neglects big things. But the chances are it would stand up under examination most of the time. And when you are making what might be the biggest investment of your life, you aren't in a mood to take chances.

So, before you place that house on the market, spend a few dollars and a little time fixing those small things that you might have thought really didn't matter. They do.

25 to 30 Group
In what age group is the largest percentage of home buyers? Says the FHA: the 25-to-30 age group. It accounts for more than 24 per cent of all new home buyers and more than 22 per cent of existing home buyers.

In 1954, 17 per cent of new homes had aluminum windows. Today, one estimate is that the figure is up to more than 40 per cent.

85,000 Pools
A survey by Swimming Pool Age indicates that some 85,000 new swimming pools—all of the permanent, in-the-ground type—will be constructed in the United States this year. About two-thirds of them will be of the backyard variety, the rest falling into the non-residential category.

Two Thin Coats
In using marine paint on your boat, the axiom that applies to nearly all finishing materials is especially true: two thin coats are better than one thick coat.

The U. S. Marines carried the Stars and Stripes to the shores of Tripoli in 1805, the first time our flag was flown over a fortress of the Old World.

Maine passed its Prohibition Law in 1858, the first time toward the 18th Amendment of 1919.

Larger Heater Eases Tasks

THE average family uses its water heater more than any other appliance in the home—for dishwashing, bathing, laundry, cleaning and a total of 140 different household tasks.

Overworking the heater takes years off its life, and it adds greatly to operating costs. The efficiency of many of automatic appliances depends upon the hot water supply.

Increasing use of home laundry and automatic dish washing equipment has brought with it a need for larger size water heaters in most homes. A properly sized tank is one which is large enough to provide a margin of extra capacity to meet maximum current as well as possible future demands.

Here's The Answer To Painting

QUESTION: Southern pine siding has been recommended to me as being inexpensive, but I have been told that this wood is difficult to paint. Is there any way of getting a satisfactory paint job on Southern pine?

ANSWER: Southern pine can be satisfactorily painted if the proper prime coat and top coat are selected and if they are properly applied. Because of the long growing season in the South, this pine has wide bands of both summer and spring wood which not only absorb paint differently but also react differently to absorbed water. These differences cause strains in the bond between paint and wood which can cause breaks in the paint film.

It is important to select the better grades of siding, using only B and better or C grade which has been properly seasoned.

The primer is of paramount importance when painting this wood, and it is best to use one that is specifically recommended for this wood. Insured oil primers of the type Federal Specification TT-P-25a have the longest history of all special primers for this wood. Similar primers are available as regular house paint primers and will give good service if the wood is carefully selected and all good painting practices are followed, but they are not foolproof.

Blister-resistant primers which are specified for Southern pine also can be used. A paint dealer recommending them should be able to point out examples where they are giving good service. Aluminum primers have been recommended by the Forest Products Laboratory of the Department of Agriculture, but the primer selected should be one specifically recommended for Southern pine.

The best selection for the top coat should be the recommendation of the manufacturer of the primer. It is highly desirable

Civil Defense-Game Unit
Radio System Inaugurated

THE STATEWIDE radio communications system of the Pennsylvania Game Commission and the State Council of Defense was inaugurated at 11 a. m., DST, yesterday in the South Office Building at the State Capitol.

M. J. Golden, Executive Director of the Game Commission, officiated at the ceremonies. The first message transmitted was a tape-recorded dedicatory address by Governor David L. Lawrence. James A. Thompson, President of the Game Commission and Dr. Richard Gerstell, Director of the State Council of Civil Defense, also participated in the dedication. Other Game Commission members and Civil Defense officials were present, as were legislators, reporters, leading sportsmen, heads of state agencies and other interested persons.

Governor Lawrence praised the two agencies "for the effective planning which has gone into this Commonwealth radio system." The Governor's message expressed satisfaction, also, that this two-way communication system brings to Pennsylvania the use of electronic facilities which will meet the challenge of our needs in this uncertain 20th Century. He noted that these facilities, in the hands of key personnel... "men on the firing line who are trained to handle emergencies of all kinds and in all Pennsylvania localities" can prove of great value to the Commonwealth in time of emergency or disaster.

Partially Operated
The newly-completed Commission-CD radio system has been partially operative since last fall. During the intervening months its potentialities were demonstrated during the flood period and emergency situations in the state. It proved effective, too, in coping with serious Game Law infractions throughout the hunting season.

The Game Commission has, for many years, looked forward to the services of such a communication medium, but would not act until equipment that would assure maximum performance and efficiency became available. Another factor was the cost—approximately $500,000. Under the present two-agency arrangement a substantial share of the outlay was borne by the State Council of Civil Defense under the Federal Matching Fund Program.

Because of the availability of these funds and the required equipment the Game Commission and Civil Defense authorities contracted, in 1958, for the installation of this system. The necessary purposes were authorized by the Federal Communications Commission, thus assuring a workable channel and the frequencies to best serve the intended purposes.

Main Building
The Civil Defense central radio control console is located in the Main Capitol Building at Harrisburg, with a console at each of the three area headquarters. Mobile and portable equipment has provided other required facilities, along with communications in the CD rescue helicopter.

The Game Commission maintains a central console in the South Office Building at the Capitol and a console in each of its six field division headquarters. Thirty to 35 mobile (vehicle) units are now operating in each of the divisions, a total of 206. Each of the field divisions is assigned five portable units also. The latter are pack sets carried by Game Protectors operating on foot. They provide communications at points inaccessible by mobile units.

Twenty-five unattended and automatic repeater towers provide both fixed and mobile equipment with relaying facilities, assuring maximum coverage across Pennsylvania.

With the inauguration of this radio system the State Council of Civil Defense and the Game Commission join the ranks of utilities companies, aircraft, ships, police and fire departments and others that have time-tested the two-way communications tool and found it most useful.

Just Between Us—

—By Bobby Westbrook

Ever since the time I pretended myself into bursting my own appendix, I have been a firm believer in the power of mind over matter. But even I am awed by the fact that I am now pretending myself to Rome—Italy, that is.

It took me six years to burst that appendix. It all started at the age of six when a younger cousin, in a bedtime rough-house, jumped up and down on my stomach—twice. It hurt, but not as much as I pretended.

I was a pretty good pretender, even then, and I knew enough about appendicitis to describe the symptoms accurately and to such in the right spot; so I ended up in the hospital, the object of much general concern, with an ice pack on my stomach and a triumphant feeling "I guess that will teach Helen not to jump on my stomach."

It worked so well that I used it judiciously, and at long intervals, and only in emergencies for six years. But when an excruciating pain was diagnosed as "that appendix again," and they rushed me to the hospital for an operation, I kept thinking that I ought to confess before it was too late.

But there were so many people and they were all going to so much trouble that I never did get enough courage to tell them that there never had been any appendicitis. Even when I was taking ether I was thinking that when I came out of it, I'd have to face a battery of accusing eyes over those operating masks, all of them looking at me and saying "You don't have appendicitis."

Nobody was more surprised than I when I came back to consciousness with a drain in my side and the warning that the appendix had burst and I was really in for it. I have always felt that it served me right, and have been extremely cautious ever since about pretending symptoms of anything even a headache.

But I didn't think there was any harm in pretending that, when my last child graduated from college, I'd go to Italy to visit my sister, Shirley, and her family. I promised her lightly enough, "I wouldn't it be fun," and progressed to "just think how exciting it would be to see Embassy life in action," to "I wonder how much it would cost."

And all of a sudden, I'm going—next Tuesday, I'm going. It's impossible, of course; people with no money don't leave their jobs for all summer and hop off to Italy. But somehow, I'm again caught in the dilemma of being unable to confess that I've been pretending all the time.

So many other people have become involved. Envy Schick is coming in as my summer replacement. A friend took my promise so seriously that she's coming over with me. Nancy has arranged to board out her cat. I've got my ticket and hotel reservations for two nights in London and two nights in Paris and Shirley is meeting the 11:15 a.m. plane on Sunday in Rome.

I just haven't the courage now to say weakly, "I was only fooling," so I guess I'll take what's coming to me. But I still think I'll wake up in the middle of the Atlantic, ringed about with accusing eyes and people saying "YOU can't go to Italy."

What will happen then, I'll have to wait until I come out from under the ether to find out.

The Wyckoff
Shopper

"the friendly store"
A.B. Wyckoff
STROUDSBURG, PA.

As Mr. Wyckoff expresses it, "Egypt has come to Wyckoff's."

He refers to the shipment of Egyptian jewelry—authentic reproductions of that worn by early Egyptian queens—newly arrived in our jewelry department. He might also be referring to the toys or decorative figures of Sahara camels on display in our very cosmopolitan gift center. These camels are of genuine leather, have beaded trim, and in some cases are mounted by rather fearsome sheiks. According to the plastic bags in which they are encased, they are "hand sewn," and make excellent talismans for your automobile.

As for the jewelry—it is quite elaborate and very different from our American styles. This, of course, assures us that the woman who prides herself upon owning and wearing things that are definitely not "run of the mill" will love them, and gobble them up quickly. In the selection there is a poison ring, for instance. This is of silver, with a rather high setting upon a plain, adjustable band. The setting is mounted with a turquoise-like gem, and opens to reveal a small compartment in which such femmes fatale as Cleopatra and Lucrezia stuff around, in the event you dislike your escort of the evening! Today, what with poison rings utilize the little case for pictures, or for carrying a tiny dab of cotton saturated in their most devastating perfume.

Although designed for women, I think the man who dates the gal with the poison ring must do well to wear one of the good luck bracelets from Egypt. These are as charming as the legend that guarantees their magic prowess. Bangle style, they have a tiny silver band on the underside from which dangle a series of silver drops. The price is only 2.50.

Pharaonic handmade disc or mesh bracelets may also be found in the collection, priced at 6.98 and 7.50. All are of silver, some gilded. Perhaps the most lavish of all the Egyptian imports is an elaborate set composed of bib-type necklace, bracelet and earrings of gold mesh, red sea coral, and mummy heads. Mummy heads, I am told, are enameled turquoise porcelain. The original of this interesting set, was owned by Queen Nefertiti, wife of King Akhnaton, and is in the possession of the National Museum of Cairo. The price at Wyckoff's is just 15.00.

Lightning Hits Chapel

LIGHTNING struck a large oak tree in the road of the Wesley Chapel, on Route 611 near Allen Roth's Restaurant, then hit the chapel about 4 a.m. Saturday during the electrical storm.

Hitting the tree the lightning broke off branches and skinned bark before hitting the chapel ripping off a section of weather boards about four feet wide and 12 feet long.

From the weather boards the bolt followed through the wall striking the organ. The organ was totally destroyed and because it acted as a ground possibly was the main factor in preventing a fire.

The force of the bolt was so great that it blew the light bulbs right out of the sockets leaving only the base. The switches in the walls were also blown out of the wall.

Sitting Judge Principle Reaffirmed By Attorneys

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Bar Assn. yesterday reaffirmed its support of the sitting judge principle.

Specifically, it voted to apply the sitting judge principle to judgeship contests in the local courts and also to judges running for re-election to the state appellate courts.

This means, a spokesman said, that plebiscites among all Philadelphia lawyers are to be held whenever a judge is running either locally or for the State Supreme or Superior courts.

If found qualified, he will then be supported by the bar association.

The action resolved a dispute that began long before the April 26 primary over the candidacies of Judge Blair F. Gunther, a Republican, of Pittsburgh, running for re-election to another 10-year term on the State Superior Court, and of Philadelphia Common Pleas Court Judge Gerald F. Flood, running for the same post on the Democratic ticket. Gunther ran on both tickets in the primary but Flood outpolled him on the Democratic slate.

The judiciary committee of the association several months ago voted a hands-off policy on the Superior Court contest.

This led to a serious dispute between the judiciary committee and the PBS's board of directors, which later spread throughout the entire association.

It was then decided to let the general membership determine the problem at its June meeting, and a conference group was set up, composed of members of the judiciary committee and the board of governors.

As a result of meetings of the conference group, former Chancellor Bernard G. Segal presented three resolutions.

The first two, which related to the reaffirmation of the over-all support of sitting judges and its application to the judges of the appellate courts, had the approval of the conference group.

Because of insufficient time, the third resolution was not approved by the conference group. It provided for a plebiscite to be held among Philadelphia lawyers on statewide appellate court judgeships.

Your Ethics Are Showing

Dear Abby: I fell in love with a young dentist. He is married but I've seen his wife and she's not so hot. I am much cuter. Well, I wanted to get to know him better so I made an appointment. There was absolutely nothing wrong with my teeth and he said so. But this young dentist took a full mouth X-ray for free. He charged me $30. Then he cleaned my teeth for $10. Now he tells me I have four impacted wisdom teeth that must be extracted. He says that will cost $150.

All this time he gave me no encouragement. My girlfriend says I should report him to the Dental Society for unethical practices. Should I?

Dear Gypsey: For a girl who deliberately made an appointment with a married dentist for the purpose of "getting to know him better" — you have a lot of nerve complaining about "ethics." If you question his professional judgment, see another dentist for strictly professional reasons.

Dear Abby: We bought this house four years ago and never had the money to put in a lawn so we had just about 2/3 of an acre of bare dirt to the side and back. We have three boys — six, 10 and 12 — and they like to play outside. All the kids in the neighborhood come to play in our yard. I have put up with yelling and screaming for four years, and our yard is the worst looking yard on the block.

Now that we can afford it, I told my husband to dig up the dirt and plant grass and some shrubs. The boys put up a fight, saying it would spoil their play place. I say they can play on the school grounds five blocks away, but they say the bigger boys chase them away. Am I wrong to want a decent-looking yard for once in my life?

Dear Likes Grass: The years when you can look out your kitchen window and see children playing are too few and fly by too swiftly. When the boys go off to college — or to their Uncle Sam — you'll have plenty of time to admire the grass. Dirt can be beautiful!

Dear Abby: My husband has the world's worst taste when it comes to buying me a gift of clothing. When I open one of these packages I can hardly keep a straight face. How does a wife go about telling her husband she appreciates the "thought" but she'd rather have the money? Or at least let her go shopping with him to make sure some unscrupulous sales person doesn't stick him with something she wanted to get rid of?

STUCK WITH JUNK

Dear Abby: Now is the time for some diplomatic frankness. Tell hubby you know how hard he works for his money and, as his partner and helpmate, so you want to be sure he gets his money's worth, so you want to go along to be sure he does. Now what husband in his right mind could refuse that kind of an offer?

Confidential To "Full Of Pride": You are full of prunes. Pride has caused more divorces than adultery. Take him back.

"What's your problem?" Write to Abby in care of this paper. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Pennsy Depends On Tic And Toc

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Pennsylvania Railroad is depending on tic and toc to step up service to freight customers. Tic is short for Transportation Information Center, and toc stands for Transportation Operations Center, new means of assuring one-time delivery of rush shipments.

Fred Carpi, a railroad vice president, said, "We refer to the new centers as tic and toc because of their initials and because they symbolize the clock-like precision we have as a goal for the important place these . . . projects have in our customer service program."

"Tic is geared, Carpi said, to follow a specific car or a group of cars carrying a single shipment of 'hot' freight, making certain that delivery at destination is made on schedule, even if unforeseen situations arise.

Tic serves as a car locating bureau, Carpi explained that sometimes a shipper had a sudden change in plans and may want to reroute a car already en route. The quickly locates the car, informs the sales office, and the shipper is able to determine how he wants the shipment rerouted.

Treasury Bonds, Notes

By William A. Doyle

Q. What is the essential difference between U.S. Treasury bonds and U.S. Treasury notes?

A. First, suppose we explain that they are both debt obligations of the Federal government. When you buy a U.S. bond or note, you become a creditor of the U.S. Government. The Treasury owes you money.

The Treasury is pledged to pay back the money it has borrowed from you — the par value of the bond or note — when the bond matures. When you own a registered bond, the Treasury Department sends you a check for the interest due every six months. When you own a bearer bond, you collect your interest by detaching a coupon from the bond every six months and presenting it for payment. You can cash coupons through banks.

Until fairly recently, all Treasury notes were bearer securities. However, the purchasers of the six most recent notes have the option of taking them in either bearer- or registered form.

Q. I have in my possession a coupon with the following description: "The United States of America will pay to bearer on Oct. 15, 1927, at the Treasury Department, Washington, or at a designated agency, being six months interest then due on $50 Fourth Liberty Loan, 4 1/2 percent, Gold Bond of 1933-1938."

Also, Congress has imposed a limit on the interest rate that can be paid on bonds. The highest interest rate that can be paid on bonds is 4 1/2 percent a year. There is no statutory limitation on the interest on notes.

Q. Are U.S. Treasury bonds and notes registered on the books of the Treasury Department in the names of the owners or are they "bearer" securities?

A. All Treasury bonds can be either the registered or bearer type. The owner of the bonds decides which way he wants them.

Also, Congress has imposed a limit on the interest rate that can be paid on bonds. The highest interest rate that can be paid on bonds is 4 1/2 percent a year. There is no statutory

No. F03935196." Also, an amount of $1.06 is shown. Does this have any value? If so, would you know how much?

A. Yes, it has a value of exactly the amount stated—$1.06. That coupon was evidently detached from the bearer bond described. It represents the interest due for the six months ended Oct. 15, 1927. You can cash it through a bank.

There are literally millions and millions of dollars' worth of unredeemed interest coupons and U.S. Treasury bearer bonds and notes still in the hands of the public — even though they are past due.

Many people forget to (or for some other reasons fail to) cash coupons and bearer securities when they come due. This, of course, is foolish. Past due but unredeemed coupons and or bonds don't draw interest and no longer work for you.

Unearth Gateway

CIRENCESTER, England (AP) — Archaeologists have unearthed parts of a monumental turreted gateway about 100 feet wide in this ancient Roman town. It had been mutilated apparently by medieval vandals but bears evidence of passages for both carriages and pedestrians.

Attention Called To Sneak Dumps

DR. C. HAYDEN Phillips, Regional Medical Director, today called attention to a recent announcement made by the State Health Department. He pointed out that sneak dumps of waste oil and even insecticides into streams resulted in the warning being issued.

Dumping of waste oil, even in isolated spots, can create public health hazards and pollute streams, according to Karl M. Mason, Director of the State Health Department's Environmental Health Bureau, said Dr. Phillips.

"If such discharges reach any stream, they will contaminate the water," he said. "This is in violation of the Clean Streams Law and Local Health Ordinance Nuisance Laws."

Will Investigate The State Health Official said the Department will investigate any reports of dumping of this type. He said information on license numbers, description of truck and time and place of the dumping would assist the investigators.

He urged anyone who sees or knows of such dumping to immediately notify the Regional Office of the State Health Department. In this area (covering Columbia, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Monroe, Pike, Susquehanna, Wayne, and Wyoming Counties) persons should call Paul R. Heitzenrater, Acting Regional Sanitary Engineer, at 71 North Franklin St., Wilkes-

BANGOR — Borough Council Monday night voted to contribute tax funds toward the construction of storm sewers in the borough if the bids which will be received tonight are within reason.
